

9A LITTLE MOUNTAIN BLUE

At Thredbo Village you are already 1370 metres above sea level. As you go higher the air temperature will drop 2 or 3 degrees for every 250 metres you ascend.

As the air at altitude is thinner, you may get puffed more quickly than you would expect. In order to acclimatise, it is a good idea to tackle one of the short walks around the village first.

The sun is very strong at higher altitudes so bring sunscreen and wear a hat. It is recommended that you carry at least 1 litre of water per person and take some food with you.

The weather can change without warning. It can get cold quickly (it sometimes snows in summer), so you'll need to take a warm, windproof jacket with you.

Strong, comfortable walking shoes are important and insect repellent is also a good idea. Wherever you go for a walk, tell someone your intended route and expected return time. Don't forget to let them know when you get back safely.

WILDFLOWER COVER

Each year promises a new and spectacular display, the wildflowers are a real highlight of the Snowies. Around November the alpine wildflowers season starts with the shrubs such as Alpine Hovea and the Alpine Shaggy-pea blooming at the lower alpine elevations. Moving into December you can catch the gorgeous white blossoms on the Alpine Mint-bush, the lilac Feldmark Eyebrights, a sea of Silver Daisies and Billy-buttons. January sees the flowers in the alpine region in all their glory, with the blooming season for the lower areas drawing to a close. In late February and March the cooler temperatures and frosts arrive so the wildflowers start to shut down and get ready for the winter ahead and usually around April the first of the snowfalls arrive.

RESPECTING THE ENVIRONMENT

Thredbo is located within the Kosciuszko National Park. The Park's outstanding natural features received international recognition in 1977 when it was made a UNESCO Biosphere Reserve.

Camping is permitted virtually anywhere in the Park except:

- in the catchment areas of the glacial lakes
- in the resort areas
- at Yarrangobilly Caves

Basic facilities such as pit toilets and fireplaces are provided in the picnic/camping areas. Elsewhere camps should be out of sight of the roads and at least 100 metres away from watercourses.

Mountain biking is permitted on all fire and maintenance trails within the National Park. Avoid costly fines and damage to the environment by observing the rules when visiting the National Park.

THREDBO WALKS MAP

MOUNT KOSCIUSZKO SUMMIT

TIME 4 - 6 hours DISTANCE 13km return FITNESS LEVEL REQUIRED Moderate
KEY ATTRACTIONS Stand on the top of Australia (2228m) and enjoy panoramic 360 degree views

MOUNT KOSCIUSZKO LOOKOUT

TIME 1 - 2 hours DISTANCE 4km return FITNESS LEVEL REQUIRED Low
KEY ATTRACTIONS Views of Australia's highest peaks and alpine landscapes

Take the Kosciuszko Express Chairlift, or Snowgums Chairlift, to the top. Here you will find Eagles Nest Restaurant that is open year round for coffee, a snack or a meal. From this point follow the paved path out of what is known as the Basin. The Basin is an intermediate snow sports area in the wintertime and the top station of Karel's T-bar is the highest lifted point in Australia, at 2037 metres above sea level. The footbridge crosses Merritts Creek and you start on the metal walkway in the Back Basin. On your left (west) the jumble of granite boulders is the edge of the Ramshead Range.

The majority of the walk follows a raised metal pathway. This pathway was completed in 1999 after 17 years of construction. Each summer, maintenance on the track is required due to the effect of snow creep, that is, accumulated snow is not stationary and will start to creep down a slope like a mini glacier. The track is not galvanised, hence its rusty appearance, as alpine plants have a low tolerance to zinc used in the galvanising process.

Follow the metal walkway to the Kosciuszko Lookout (altitude 2000m). You are now about a third of the way to Mt Kosciuszko. The stone stairs just before the lookout were constructed after the metal walkway was totally destroyed by snow creep. The metal platform at the lookout was constructed in 2002.

The rounded shape of Kosciuszko is most probably due to erosion caused by a large ice sheet during the last ice age. If you only wish to walk the 4 return kilometres to the lookout you should return from here.

Striking out to the summit, the track is now downhill over the headwaters of the Snowy River and then goes up and over the next saddle. There is no one specific spot where the Snowy River rises; several small creeks come together to form the larger river below the track. If you look carefully there are tiny native fish swimming in the creeks called Mountain Galaxias, they actually climb out of the water to sun themselves up on the rocks!

From the Lake Cootapatamba lookout, you can see Lake Cootapatamba on your left (one of mainland Australia's five glacial lakes and the highest lake in Australia) with Mt Kosciuszko rising behind it.

Follow the walking track to Rawson Pass (altitude 2110m) where the metal path ends as it meets the Old Summit Road - and you're almost there. From Christmas to Easter toilets are available here.

From Rawson Pass the summit is only 1.5km away. The path becomes a little steeper and circles the summit passing through granite rock streams that house the nocturnal Pygmy Possum. This native threatened species was thought to be extinct until re-discovered in 1966.

Upon reaching the summit, at 2228 metres above sea level, relax on the top of Australia, pat yourself on the back for your achievement and then return to Thredbo following the same track.

MERRITTS NATURE TRACK

TIME 2 - 3 hours DISTANCE 5km downhill
FITNESS LEVEL REQUIRED Moderate to High, some steep downhill sections
KEY ATTRACTIONS Picnic spots, variety of forests, mountain streams

There are sections of this walk that can be challenging for small children or people with knee problems.

This is an interesting and varied walk of about 2 1/2 hours from the top of either Kosciuszko Express or Snowgums Chairlift, down the mountain amongst the trees and wildflowers. If you are interested in learning more about the environment you're walking through, pick up a copy of the free, Self Guided Ecology walk from Thredbo Sports.

The walk begins at 1930m (above the natural tree line) and ends in the village at 1370m. This change in elevation is reflected by the different plant communities you'll walk through including alpine, sub-alpine, wet heath and montane.

When you get off the Kosciuszko Express Chairlift, turn left down the gravel track for 20 metres and follow the trail down to the top of Snowgums Chairlift.

The track enters the trees and winds down beside Merritts Creek where you will come to the first lookout. The route then crosses the Village Trail and Bunny Walk (these are winter snow slopes). When you come out into the open near Snowgums Chairlift, turn left.

From beside the Bunny Walk Station on the Snowgums Chairlift there is a wonderful view down the mountain and you can see Kosciuszko Express Chairlift, Meadows Nature Track, Thredbo Village and in the valley to the south, Ramshead Chair and the Golf Course.

The walk returns to the Snow Gum forest and crosses over an access road. Beware of vehicles and mountain bikes on the access road. You then descend through towering Alpine Ash to cross the Merritts Creek over the footbridge. The track continues out of the trees, across a snow slope and back into the trees where the delightful 'Birrallee Camp' on your right hand side is a great place to stop for a tranquil break by the bubbling river.

You then cross under Merritts Chairlift. Looking back up the lift line is the famous Schuss, one of Thredbo's more spectacular snow slopes. Again, please be aware of vehicles and mountain bikes on this shared trail. Turn right onto the 4WD track and cross the creek over the bridge. (The path straight ahead will lead you to Woodridge.) Just past the bridge the walking track takes off to the left and climbs through Black Sallee trees to the top of the bobsled. Follow the steps down the left hand side of the bobsled, turn right when you come to the paved path and then continue along beside the Thredbo River back to Valley Terminal.

Once you leave the top of the Kosciuszko Express there are no toilets until you arrive back in Thredbo Village. There are however some beautiful stream crossings where you can have a paddle and enjoy a picnic.

MERRITTS TRAVERSE

TIME 2 - 3 hours DISTANCE 6km FITNESS LEVEL REQUIRED Moderate
KEY ATTRACTIONS Village and valley views, differing vegetation layers, tranquility

From the top of the Kosciuszko Express or the Snowgums top station follow the Merritts Nature Trail. Where the walk crosses the Village Trail, turn left and follow the road across Merritts Creek and the base of Sponar and Antons T-Bars. These T-Bars are named after Tony Sponar and Charles Anton, two of the original pioneers of Thredbo.

From the base of Antons T-Bar walk up to the top station of Gunbarrel Chairlift. Gunbarrel Chairlift was installed in 1988 to connect the beginner area at Friday Flat to the intermediate Cruiser area.

In this section of the walk there are great views of the village, the Thredbo Valley and the Wollindibby Valley down towards Jindabyne.

Numerous aboriginal artefact sites have been found on the southern side of the Wollindibby Valley dating back 10,000 years. The local aboriginal groups were the Monaro, Ngarigo and Bidawal. Around 13 Aboriginal groups would meet in the alpine area in summer. These gatherings would take advantage of the abundant food available including fish, eels, possums, kangaroos and a number of birds. Bogong moths were eaten as part of the ceremonies held in the high country. These gatherings enabled exchange and trade to take place between groups, for marriages to be arranged and for intertribal meetings and ceremonies.

Continue walking along this maintenance road until you reach the Cruiser area slopes. The top of the Cruiser Chairlift is in the alpine vegetation zone. Walk down the grassy slopes to the summer road beside the Cruiser Chairlift bottom station.

Follow the summer road as it descends rapidly through the differing vegetation zones. The alpine zone is 1850 - 2228 metres. It is too cold and windy for trees to grow, with snow on the ground from 4 to 9 months of the year. The vegetation is completely made up of ground hugging plants less than a metre high which have adapted to withstand the harsh weather conditions at this elevation.

The subalpine zone is considered to be between 1500 and 1850 metres. It is snow-covered for 1 to 4 months of the year and is characterised by low growing twisted Snow Gums. The montane zone is the final vegetation layer you will pass through on your descent. The altitude is 800 to 1500 metres and at the higher levels there is less rain than the lower montane, and the predominant trees are Alpine Ash. In the lower montane, there is higher rainfall resulting in a mixture of eucalypts, ferns and other small trees.

Turn left down the road that meets the summer road. This will wind its way back to Friday Flat and then you can walk along the footpath back to the village.

Once you leave the top of the Kosciuszko Express there are no toilets until you arrive back in Thredbo.

DEAD HORSE GAP AND THREDBO RIVER TRACK

TIME 4 - 5 hours DISTANCE 10km return
FITNESS LEVEL REQUIRED Moderate to High, some steep downhill sections
KEY ATTRACTIONS Wildflowers, brumby habitat, river walk, protected in bad weather

There are sections of this walk that can be challenging for small children or people with knee problems.

Evident on this walk is the impact of the intense bushfires of January 2003. Most of this area was heavily burnt, and yet a close look at the surviving Snow Gums along the track will reveal the resilience of alpine flora. Look out for the striking epicormic shoots, the new plant growth that sprouts all the way along these trees from trunk to tip after fire damage, and ensures their survival.

When you reach the top of the Kosciuszko Express Chairlift, follow the paved Mt Kosciuszko walking track to the point where a sign on the left indicates the start of the Dead Horse Gap Walk. Looking to your left is the Basin T-Bar.

Continue on the track to the top of the Basin T-Bar and onto Karel's T-Bar lower station. The track traverses along the Ramshead Range and across tall alpine herbfields, wet heath and boggy areas.

From here follow the track as it rises, and continue along it toward the distant saddle. The pole on the skyline in the saddle is the track's highest point (2019m) - it's all downhill now. Follow the track to the tree line near the big rocky outcrop. Here lies a beautiful view of Thredbo Valley below, and straight ahead (south) the Pilot Wilderness, the Cascade Valley, Upper Murray Gorge and the Victorian high country.

To the right (west) the crown-shaped rocky peak towers over Bogong Creek. Below it is Dead Horse Gap, a low point in the range where the Kosciuszko Alpine Way, winding up the valley below you, passes across the mountains and down to the Murray River.

The track now enters the trees and follows the ridge down near the Kosciuszko Alpine Way where it joins the Thredbo River Track at Dead Horse Gap.

Dead Horse Gap itself is the highest point on the Kosciuszko Alpine Way (1580m). Brumbies (wild horses) live in this area. The gap is the divide between the Snowy and Murray River systems. The road leading from Dead Horse Gap to Thredbo follows the ancient track used by the aborigines of the 'Ngarigo' tribe, who inhabited the Monaro Plains and the mountains east of the Great Divide. Dead Horse Gap is also the trackhead for the Pilot Wilderness Area. The Cascade management trail provides access for bushwalkers and mountain bike riders to the wilderness area.

If you diverge from the track and cross the Kosciuszko Alpine Way you can read the information boards regarding the plants and animals, Aboriginal and European history of the area.

The Thredbo River Track starts on the grassy flat beside the Thredbo River. It is an easy walk along this track to Thredbo Golf Course then on to the village. On a warm day, a dip in one of the pools along the river walk may be in order after your descent from the range.

There are no toilets along this track once you have left the Kosciuszko Express top station.

MAIN RANGE WALK

TIME 8 - 10 hours DISTANCE 32km circuit
FITNESS LEVEL REQUIRED Very High
KEY ATTRACTIONS Glacial lakes, crossing the Snowy River, dramatic 360 degree views

The track passes Lake Albina and Blue Lake, two of the five glacial lakes you will see on this walk. These are the only glacial lakes found on mainland Australia. Because of this, the walk is often referred to as the Lakes Walk.

The track takes you through some very fragile and rare patches of windswept feldmark (fields of stone supporting unique plant communities) as you walk along the ridge tops of Australia's highest peaks. From Mt Carruthers the views looking across the Sentinel and out to Watsons Crag will take your breath away.

To start from Thredbo, follow the track notes for the Mount Kosciuszko Summit Walk to Rawson Pass. The Main Range Walk veers to the right from just below the summit of Mt Kosciuszko. It passes along the top of the range via Mueller's Pass, Northcote Pass, Carruthers Peak and then drops down to cross the Snowy River and climbs steeply out to Charlotte Pass.

From Charlotte Pass the return route follows the Old Kosciuszko Road to Seaman's Hut and then returns to Rawson Pass. At Rawson Pass turn left and follow the metal track back to Thredbo.

If you're planning to do this walk it is important to have a topographical map and a compass and to know how to navigate by them. Because of its length this tour is best done as an overnight walk or join one of the Thredbo guided day tours which includes a bus transfer back from Charlotte Pass.

SEAMAN'S HUT WALK

TIME 4 - 6 hours DISTANCE 12km return
FITNESS LEVEL REQUIRED Moderate
KEY ATTRACTIONS Historic hut, Main Range views

Seaman's Hut is on the Old Kosciuszko Road. It was built in 1929 as a memorial to W. Laurie Seaman and Evan Hayes who perished in a blizzard in this area on August 14, 1928.

Follow the directions for the Mount Kosciuszko Summit Walk. At Rawson Pass turn right and follow the road 1.5km to Seaman's Hut, one of the last remaining shelters on the Main Range.

The summit road, built in 1906 is now closed to vehicles. At Seaman's Hut you have a beautiful view of the Main Range. Retrace your steps to the Mount Kosciuszko Summit Track, turn left and head back to the Chairlift.

From Valley Terminal cross the low bridge, turn right and walk across the Village Green. Cross the road and then the river via the bridge to the Community Centre. Between the end of the bridge and the Community Centre you will see the path on the left, leading off along the riverbank. Just after you climb over the roots of a huge fallen Alpine Ash the tracks divide, with Merritts Nature Track continuing up the hill to the right, and Meadows continuing straight ahead, crossing the Sundowner snow slope again. Head up hill crossing under the Snowgums Chairlift just above Lovers Leap Station. Now the track is shared with Mountain Bikers as it heads through the forest before returning to the village via Mount Funnelweb Run. If you choose to continue on at the Funnelweb junction, you will meet the Riverside Walk.

The Cannonball Run is a gruelling 6km downhill ride, infamous amongst mountain bikers.

Riding in the resort area is limited to the marked mountain bike tracks. Bikes are not permitted on lifts unless participating in an approved Raw NRG tour. A specific mountain bike map is available from Raw NRG at the Thredbo Service Station.
